

Story #2

Fixing a bug

I do all of my coding on a relatively new HP computer. I use Windows 10 and keep all of my drivers up to date, yet for some reason I could not get nodemon to run on my machine. I spent countless hours scarrowing different forums trying to figure out how to fix this problem. I even went so far as uninstalling and reinstalling all of my software.

Finally I reached out to some of my mentors for advice about how to handle this problem. With their help and the help of countless stack overflow articles we found out that certain node modules were being picked from the wrong PATH. We worked together and were eventually able to fix the problem! I learned that there's nothing wrong with reaching out for help, especially when you're at your wits end.
